Former Rep. Lukens missing in inaction

Woman's lawyer, FBI seeking him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years after he resigned from Congress in disgrace, former Ohio Rep. Donald Lukens is back in the limelight — but nowhere to be found.

The FBI is investigating him, and he is a defendant in a civil suit alleging he caused permanent psychological damage to a teen-age girl who said Lukens, 62, paid her for sex.

The FBI has been questioning people who worked for Lukens when he was a Republican congressman from western Ohio, sources familiar with the case said Thursday.

The investigation was part of the probe of present and former lawmakers who overdrew their accounts at the House bank, said the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Meanwhile, the woman whose allegations of sexual misconduct led to Lukens' 1989 conviction for contributing to the unwedness of a minor, has been trying to get Lukens for damages.

But she has been unable to find Lukens to serve him with the suit seeking compensation for "severe mental anguish, pain and suffering, emotional distress, humiliation and psychological injury."

Rosie Coffman, now 22, testified during Lukens' trial that the congressman paid her $40 for sex when she was 16.

Coffman's civil suit seeks an unspecified sum in excess of $750,000, plus attorney's fees.

A trial in that case had been set for Oct. 27 but was rescheduled for Dec. 16, according to the Franklin County Common Pleas Court clerk's office.

The most recent entry on the docket for that case says certified mail sent to Lukens in Middletown, Ohio, came back "addressee unknown."

Lukens has been living in Washington since 1991, when he was released from jail in Columbus after serving nine days of a 30-day sentence.

Some former Lukens aides said the former congressman has remained in Washington since then.

Coffman's attorney, W. Jeffrey Moore, said he had done what he could within her financial means to find Lukens.

"I think he's somebody who is going to be hard to contact, and so it would require an investigator full-time to find out where he is," Moore said.

Lukens left Congress in 1990. He resigned before his term expired because the House Ethics Committee voted to investigate new charges that he had made an improper sexual advance toward a House elevator operator.

As part of his probation, Lukens had been required to undergo counseling with a sex therapist.

On October 19th, 1995- [redacted] asked me to write a letter to [redacted] - the atty.
for "Buzzy" Lukers. Along with that letter I had made copies of all the itemized expenses incurred.

On November 14, 1995 at 4:00 pm,
I had a conversation with [redacted] He said I had [redacted] a money request had been submitted to the Court for payment. He then asked me if I had known how the trial came out - I said "yes,
I knew the results. He then said - Has [redacted] told you what happened I said no,
she didn't talk about it.
He said she made a great witness - that he wished he had more like her. He said everything that ~~was~~ asked the ~~the~~ Pros.

her, she said no, I didn't say that, that statement is not true". He then said that he had spoken with some jury members and they told him that they discredited the FBI's report because all statements made by [redacted] were wrong - he laughed and told me to "Thank her" again for him. That he would get her money to her as soon possible.

Lukens argues conviction should be overturned

BY KATHERINE RIZZO

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. Rep. Donald "Buzz" Lukens of Middletown is trying to convince a three-judge appeals panel that his bribery and conspiracy conviction was the result of a courtroom blunder.

The defense, which won a combination of innocent verdicts and a deadlocked jury at Mr. Lukens' first trial in 1995, contends federal Judge Gladys Kessler should have limited the scope of Mr. Lukens' second trial in March.

Mr. Lukens wanted jurors to hear only about one transaction and nothing about other transactions that the first jury ruled were not bribes.

The trial judge allowed the government to present all of its conspiracy evidence.

In briefs filed with the U.S. Court of Appeals, Mr. Lukens again contends the second jury heard too much evidence.

The Republican, who now lives in Dallas, was given the minimum sentence of 30 months' imprisonment, but Judge Kessler said she considered imprisoning him "a waste of taxpayers' money."

She allowed him to remain free while awaiting the outcome of his appeal.

Mr. Lukens' prosecution was the byproduct of an unrelated scandal involving the former House bank. Investigators examining questionable transactions found two $7,500 deposits in Congress' in-house bank, where overdrafts were penalty-free and lawmakers could write checks in excess of their next several months' pay.

Bribery charge admitted

Case centered on 'Buz' Lukens

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The man accused of bribing former Rep. Donald "Buz" Lukens entered a guilty plea today and was sentenced to two years in prison on a single conspiracy count.

The government dropped the bribery counts and other charges against trade school operator John Fitzpatrick of Middletown, Ohio. He pleaded guilty to conspiring to defraud the United States by impairing the lawful functions of the government.

That charge stemmed from his behavior when auditors tried to examine the books at the now-defunct Cambridge Technical Institute.

Lukens, R-Ohio, was convicted of taking bribes from Fitzpatrick and sentenced to 30 months in prison; but is free on bail. His appeal is scheduled to be heard March 21.

Fitzpatrick told U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler he admitted agreeing with others at the trade school to "delay turning over certain documents to the Department of Education auditors."

Afterward, Fitzpatrick said he was willing to stand trial but decided to enter a plea to relieve his 14-year-old son's anxiety.

"What I did, I did for him," Fitzpatrick said.

A six-week trial last year had resulted in a hung jury because a single holdout refused to go along with 11 other jurors' votes to convict.

He had been charged with bribery, conspiring to cover up student-aid fraud and lying to a grand jury.

The case was a complicated one, involving actions and transactions made in 1990 when both Lukens and the trade school were at the end of their tethers.

Lukens was in debt and in disgrace — the aftermath of a career-ending misdemeanor conviction of contributing to the unruliness of a minor.

The then-congressman first took money from Fitzpatrick about a week before losing the 1990 primary.

Other payments followed, before a new allegation of misbehavior forced Lukens to resign and give up his remaining power, prestige and income.

Meanwhile, the Cincinnati-based school was on the brink of being kicked out of the federal student-aid program, was being sued by its students and losing the new enrollments that had been keeping it afloat.

Fitzpatrick testified that his now-deceased boss, Henry Whitesell, had been embezzling money from the government — unbeknownst to Fitzpatrick — by taking cash for more students than actually enrolled.

Fitzpatrick testified that he stalled auditors and falsified documents only to keep control of the originals that Whitesell wanted to destroy, and that he gave $20,000 to Lukens out of charity and not because he was trying to buy official favors.

Both cases were byproducts of the House bank scandal. Investigators examining questionable transactions found deposits from Fitzpatrick and Whitesell in Lukens' account at Congress' in-house bank, where overdrafts were penalty-free and lawmakers could write checks in excess of their next several months' pay.

Man pleads to conspiracy, not bribery, in Lukens case

BY KATHERINE RIZZO

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government dropped all but one charge Thursday against the Middletown man accused of bribing former Rep. Donald Lukens, and accepted a guilty plea on a single conspiracy count.

The move eliminated the need for a second trial for John Fitzpatrick, who was sentenced to two years in prison. He was allowed to remain free until assigned to a low-security federal camp.

Last year, after six weeks of testimony and two weeks of deliberation, 11 of 12 jurors voted for convictions, but the lone holdout forced a mistrial.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said he had been willing to stand trial again but decided to enter a plea to relieve his 14-year-old son's anxiety. "What I did, I did for him," the trade school operator said. "I think the apprehension was bothering him most."

Prosecutor Thomas Eicher said the guilty plea "brings to a close an unhappy chapter in Ohio politics and education."

The government was willing to drop the other charges to avoid dragging out the case more; because the likely amount of prison time wasn't altered by accepting the conspiracy plea; and "having convicted Congressman Lukens, that aspect of the case was satisfied," Mr. Eicher said.

He said dismissal of the charges will not be a factor in Mr. Lukens' appeal, scheduled March 21.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said he refused to plead guilty to bribery counts because his son "was present at two different occasions when Congressman Lukens and I met, and he knew it wasn't bribery."

He pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the United States by impairing its lawful functions.

Lukens begins term for bribery

Ex-congressman doing 30 months in Texas

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. Rep. Donald "Buz" Lukens of Middletown has begun serving a 30-month sentence for accepting bribes during his troubled final months in office.

The federal Bureau of Prisons said Thursday that Mr. Lukens was processed into the system Jan. 28. The bureau listed his estimated date of release as March 31, 2000.

Mr. Lukens was assigned to a low-security prison in Beaumont, Texas.

The judge who reluctantly imposed the mandatory sentence on the ailing 67-year-old had recommended that Mr. Lukens be sent to a prison hospital because he has cancer.

Donald Lukens

The Beaumont facility is not a hospital, but it is part of a prison complex that includes medical services.

The bribery conviction grew out of a 1992 Capitol Hill scandal.

Mr. Lukens had been booted out of office two years earlier after his conviction on a misdemeanor charge of contributing to the unruliness of a minor.

In 1992, when shoddy bookkeeping at the House bank sent investigators poring over several years' worth of transaction records, some of the activity in Mr. Lukens' account caught the eyes of investigators.

Mr. Lukens stood trial twice in federal court. The first trial ended in innocent verdicts on some counts and a hung jury on others; the second resulted in guilty verdicts on bribery and conspiracy.

The Ohio businessman accused of giving Mr. Lukens money in exchange for his intervention with federal regulators pleaded guilty to conspiracy and is serving a two-year sentence.

WASHINGTON — The government dropped all but one charge Thursday against the man accused of bribing former Rep. Donald Lukens, and accepted a guilty plea on a single conspiracy count.

The move eliminated the need for a second trial for John Fitzpatrick of Middletown, who was sentenced to two years in prison. He was allowed to remain free until assigned to a low-security federal camp.

Last year, after six weeks of testimony and two weeks of deliberation, 11 of 12 jurors voted for convictions, but the lone holdout forced a mistrial.

Fitzpatrick said he had been willing to stand trial again but decided to enter a plea to relieve his 17-year-old son's anxiety. "What I did, I did for him," the trade school operator said. "I think the apprehension was bothering him most."

Fitzpatrick's chief prosecutor, Thomas Eicher, said the guilty plea "brings to a close an unhappy chapter in Ohio politics and education."

The government was willing to drop the other charges to avoid dragging out the case more because the likely amount of prison time wasn't altered by accepting the conspiracy plea; and "having convicted Congressman Lukens, that aspect of the case was satisfied," Eicher said.

He said dismissal of the charges against Fitzpatrick will not be a factor in Lukens' appeal, scheduled to be heard March 21.

Fitzpatrick pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the United States by impairing the lawful functions of the government.

That charge covered his behavior when auditors tried to examine the books at the now-defunct Cambridge Technical Institute, which he operated.

U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler accepted the plea and dismissed charges of conspiring to bribe a public official, bribery and lying to a grand jury.

LUKENS IN TEXAS: Donald "Buz"

Lukens, who once held the 8th District Congressional seat now occupied by Rep. John Boehner, has started a new life behind the fence of a low-security prison in Texas. Federal officials said Lukens reported on Jan. 28 to a corrections institution in Beaumont, Texas. He is serving a 30-month sentence for accepting bribes during his troubled final months as a congressman representing the city of Middletown, Union and Liberty townships in Butler County. Now 67 and suffering from recurring cancer, Lukens' reporting date had been delayed by a judge who said she did not think he belonged in prison.
